journal of microscopy*

The Microscope is an international journal founded by Arthur Barron in 1937 and dedicated to the advancement of all forms of microscopy for the biologist, mineralogist, metallographer and chemist. No matter what the field of research, the microscope is often an essential tool. A successful journal for microscopists, therefore, must interest and benefit scientists from a wide spectrum of fields.

The Microscope accomplishes this by emphasizing new advances in microscope design, new accessories, new techniques and unique applications to the study of particles, films, or surfaces of any substance. Its readership includes microscopists from a variety of industries, including pharmaceuticals, law enforcement, forensic science, environmental services, materials-analysis consulting firms, academia, conservation and government labs.

A major source of papers for The Microscope is the Inter/Micro symposia held each year in Chicago. The journal is also open to papers from other meetings and articles based on independent research.
